

Name _____ Text and Search Features

Pick a Pup

Selecting the right dog requires a lot of consideration. Two of the most common characteristics that people look for in dogs are size and energy level. If you are going to have a dog that is high energy, you must be prepared to give it the exercise and attention that it will need.

DIRECTIONS: Study the table below. Then decide which dog would be the best fit for each family.

|   | BREED         | SIZE | ENERGY LEVEL |
|---|----------------------|-------------|---------------------|
| A | Bernese Mountain Dog | Large       | Low                 |
| B | Yorkshire Terrier    | Small       | High                |
| C | Dalmatian            | Large       | High                |
| D | Cocker Spaniel       | Medium      | Medium              |
| E | English Bulldog      | Medium      | Medium              |
| F | Collie               | Large       | Medium              |
| G | Poodle               | Large       | Moderate to high    |
| H | Saint Bernard        | Large       | Low                 |
| I | Pekinese             | Small       | Low                 |
| J | Akita                | large       | Medium              |
| K | Bloodhound           | Large       | Medium              |

1. The Millers are looking for a small, low energy dog. What do you recommend?

---

2. The Johnsons are looking for a large, medium energy dog. What are their options?

---

3. The Harpers are looking for a medium-sized, medium energy dog. What are their options?

---

4. The Beamens are looking for a small, high energy dog. What do you recommend?

---