Twisting Tornadoes

Tornadoes are known as the most violent winds on earth. These "twisters," as they are often known, are fast spinning columns of air that stretch from a thunderstorm in the sky down to the earth's surface. They form inside really big thunderstorms.

The most extreme tornadoes can reach wind speeds of more than 300 miles per hour and stay on the ground for more than 60 miles. They can lift large objects like trains and throw them to the ground, rip roofs off houses, and even strip clothes off a person's body.
